Purpose of the Publication Scheme

This Publication Scheme has been prepared and approved by Little Harrowden Parish Council in accordance with the requirements of the Freedom of Information Act 2000. It outlines how the Parish Council will make information available to the public, ensuring transparency and accessibility in its operations. It:

- Ensures compliance with the Freedom of Information Act 2000.
- Sets out the classes of information the Parish Council routinely makes available.
- Clarifies how the public can access this information.
- Explains whether any charges apply for accessing information.

Scope of the Publication Scheme

This scheme applies to all recorded information held by the Parish Council, regardless of format (electronic or hard copy), unless exempt under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 or other relevant legislation.

Little Harrowden Parish Council commits:

- To proactively publish or otherwise make available as a matter of routine, information, including environmental information, which is held by the authority and falls within the classifications below.
- To specify the information which is held by the authority and falls within the classifications below.
- To proactively publish or otherwise make available as a matter of routine, information in line with the statements contained within this scheme.
- To produce and publish the methods by which the specific information is made routinely available so that it can be easily identified and accessed by members of the public.
- To review and update on a regular basis the information the authority makes available under this scheme.
- To produce a schedule of any fees charged for access to information which is made proactively available.
- To make this publication scheme available to the public.
- To publish any dataset held by the authority that has been requested, and any updated versions it holds, unless the authority is satisfied that it is not appropriate to do so; to publish the dataset, where reasonably practicable, in an electronic form that is capable of re-use; and, if any information in the dataset is a relevant copyright work and the public authority is the only owner, to make the information available for re-use under the terms of the Re-use of Public Sector Information Regulations 2015, if they apply, and otherwise under the terms of the Freedom of Information Act section 19. The term 'dataset' is defined in section 11(5) of the Freedom of Information Act. The term 'relevant copyright work' is defined in section 19(8) of that Act.

Classes of information

1. Who we are and what we do.
2. What we spend and how we spend it.
3. What our priorities are and how we are doing.
4. How we make decisions.
5. Our policies and procedures.
6. Lists and registers.
7. The services we offer.

Guide to information available under the Freedom of Information Act publication scheme

Who can I ask for information?

Anyone can request information under the Freedom of Information Act after 1st January 2005, regardless of age, nationality or location. Any information held by a public authority is eligible for release. However, a number of exemptions may be applied to protect information properly kept confidential.

Freedom of Information applies to all public authorities within the following categories:

- Central and Local Government
- The health sector
- The police and armed forces
- The education sector
- Other Public Bodies in England, Wales and Northern Ireland (Scotland is covered by its own Act)

What is a publication scheme?

Under section 19 of the Act, all public authorities are required to produce, maintain, and disclose in accordance with a publication scheme. This scheme will set out what kinds of information the public authority will proactively make available, and how they will do it. All schemes must be approved by the Information Commissioner.

A publication scheme is not just a list of documents a public authority already publishes. Rather than specifying individual documents, it describes 'classes' or 'kinds' of information (such as minutes, reports etc.). It may also prescribe a charge for providing the information, particularly if the public authority already charged for providing that information before the introduction of Freedom of Information.

How do I make a request?

All requests must:

- Be in writing (this does include emails)
- State clearly what information is required
- State the name of the applicant, and an address for correspondence

What happens when I make a request?

When a public authority receives a request for information, they must respond as soon as possible, and not later than 20 working days after receiving your request.

The public authority will consider your request, and reply.

The reply should confirm or deny whether or not they hold the information, and either provide the information you requested, or explain why it has not been provided, quoting an exemption under the Act.

What happens if the public authority doesn't understand my request?

Under the Freedom of Information Act, public authorities have a duty to advise and assist requesters. If the public authority doesn't understand your request, they will contact you to clarify what it is that you want.

What does it cost?

If you are requesting information contained in an authority's publication scheme, the scheme will also give details of whether (and how much) the authority will charge for providing the information.

If you are requesting information not contained within the publication scheme, the authority may charge you a fee, as laid down in Regulations.

These Regulations provide that requests which will cost less than £450 to answer (£600 for requests to central government) will be free of charge, although public authorities may charge for the cost of photocopying, postage etc.

If your request will cost more than this to answer, the public authority can refuse to answer your request, answer it for free, or charge up to and including the full cost of answering.

If you refuse to pay the fee, the public authority can refuse to supply the information.

What happens if my request is refused?

A request for information may only be refused by a public authority if it falls under one of the exemptions.

If your request is refused, the reply from the public authority must identify which exemption it is applying, and give you details of how to apply for an internal review of their decision to refuse.

If, after an internal review, the public authority still refuses your request, you may ask The Information Commissioner to review that decision.

How many requests can I make?

The Act does not specifically limit the number of requests you can make. However, section 14 of the Act states that a public authority can reserve the right to refuse any vexatious or repeated requests. This may include repeated requests from the same person for the same information, or requests which are intended to disrupt the authority's work.

How can I use the information I receive?

The Freedom of Information Act does not place restrictions on how the information supplied under it may be used. However, the Act does provide for exemptions for commercially sensitive information, information intended for future publication or information related to investigations, law enforcement and court records. The Act does not transfer copyright in any information supplied under it.

Can I ask for the information in a different format?

You may request that the information be supplied in any form. However, a public authority may take into account the cost of supplying the information in this form before complying with your request. In particular, you may ask for information in permanent form, in summary form, or for permission to inspect records containing the information.

It may also be possible for public authorities to supply the information in Braille or audio format, in large type, or translated into another language. However, you should discuss this with the individual public authority.

* Please Note ****

Little Harrowden Parish Council is unable to provide information in braille, translated or audio format. We may be able to provide printed information in larger format with adequate notice and would be able to provide the cost per page upon request only.
